Lebanese security forces implement strict security measures in Nabatiyeh

The Lebanese army and security forces on Monday implemented heavy security measures on all roads leading to South Lebanon's Nabatiyeh, the National News Agency reported.

The army erected checkpoints and sent patrols to the aforementioned roads. It also erected barriers at the entrance of the city, where an open air market is planned to be held next Monday.

Also, security forces prevented cars from entering the market area. They also used bomb-sniffing dogs to search for any possible explosives.
